Chapter 2
Careers in Hospitality
Over the past 100 years, the hospitality and tourism industry has experienced monumental changes due to improvements in transportation, accommodations, and new technologies. This has resulted in hospitality and tourism becoming one of the largest industries on the globe and impacting those changes was a shift in the world’s population; the traveling public’s desire to explore new places and cultures, and changing global business needs.

The Internet has had a major influence on travelers by opening up the world of hospitality and tourism as a global marketplace where someone can experience new people, places, and things. Travelers can quickly measure the cost of each travel choice against the value that the item will deliver; giving technology the ability to impact decisions about travel spending, length of stay, and type of accommodation required.

The types of businesses making up the industry, such as airlines, rental cars, hotels, restaurants, and attractions, have created a vast network of companies looking for talented people who wish to build a career in hospitality and tourism.

The hospitality and tourism industry grew so quickly in the early 20th century that it was necessary for companies engaged in the same type of business to find a way to connect with one another. This resulted in the birth of professional organizations such as the American Hotel & Lodging Association (AH&LA) and the National Restaurant Association (NRA). The purpose of industry associations is to protect, educate, and promote the needs of the people and businesses belonging to the associations. Known as member services, some examples of what associations provide to members are communicating new business trends, updating changes in laws and government requirements, and lobbying on behalf of the membership in the halls of Congress.

This unit will take a look at the history, size, and elements that, over time, have fused together hospitality and tourism into one industry. Also, this section will explore the types of careers and the cycles involved for those wishing to pursue a career in hospitality.

1. Describe the changes hospitality and tourism have experienced in modern times.
2. Explain how hospitality and tourism depend on one another for success.
3. Describe the social impact of global travel and business on hospitality and tourism.
4. Describe the scope of industry services available for today's traveler.

Joseph A. McInerney, CHA, served as president and chief executive officer of American Hotel & Lodging Association (AH&LA) from 2001 to 2013. As the head executive of the largest trade association representing the U.S. lodging industry, Mr. McInerney implemented and directed AH&LA's services, as well as provided leadership to association members. He also worked directly with the volunteer officers, board of directors, and partner state associations in determining the direction of the industry.

Mr. McInerney reorganized the association to streamline efficiency and strengthen its core operations, including consolidating its two affiliates to form the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Foundation. The AHLEF is the only educational dollar-dispensing, not-for-profit premier organization for scholarships, professional certification, instructional material, and funding for key industry research. Additionally, Mr. McInerney spearheaded the changing of the membership structure from a federation to a dual-membership format, streamlined the board of directors, and clarified the organization’s mission.

Your Task: Use the information contained in the textbook’s profile about this industry professional to complete the Professional Profile Activity in the student workbook. You may need to conduct additional research of your own about the profile topic covered in the workbook as well.
The pace of change seemed to explode following 1945 and the end of World War II, and the impact of those changes altered the face of hospitality and tourism forever. No longer was travel reserved for only the very wealthy. In the 1950s and 1960s, all forms of transportation became more accessible and affordable. This resulted in business travel becoming a common practice, and the birth of the family vacation.

In the following decades, more and more people began to travel, not just to visit family and friends, but for the pure pleasure of seeing the world. The result was tourism as we know it today. Hospitality and tourism have grown into a large industry, so much so that many countries, such as the United States, Japan, Great Britain, and China, consider it to be a key business driver within their economies.

Terms You Should Know

Hospitality—the reception and entertainment of guests, visitors, or strangers at resorts; membership clubs, conventions, attractions, special events; and other services for travelers and tourists.

Tourism—tourist travel and the services connected with it, regarded as an industry combined with hospitality.

Pineapple Fun Fact

In 1907, E.M. Statler built the first modern hotel, the Statler, in Buffalo, NY, with private bathrooms and a radio in every room. Eventually, his chain of hotels had 5,300 rooms that could accommodate 6,700 guests a day. He is considered the father of the modern hotel.
The Traveling Public

The hospitality and tourism industry exists to meet the needs of the traveling public. The reasons for traveling are varied, with each person having personal criteria for making any journey. However, the reasons why most people travel can usually be placed into one of five categories:

- Recreation
a wish for rest, relaxation, sports, and entertainment.

- Business
a need to conduct business, attend a conference, convention, or meeting.

- Culture
a desire to learn about different places and things of interest.

- Visits to family and friends
a wish or need to spend time with loved ones.

- Health issues
a need for diagnosis or treatment from a non-local medical facility.

The Internet also has a huge impact on hospitality and tourism. Not just because it is easier to find and book travel online, but because online information about the people, places, and things found around the globe has created a greater interest in visiting those destinations.
History of Hospitality and Tourism

The modern history of hospitality and tourism really began in 1910 when 60 hotel operators formed the American Hotel Protective Association. Today, this association operates as the American Hotel & Lodging Association (AH&LA) which acts as a moving force in ensuring that the hospitality and tourism industry continues to thrive and meet the needs of its global audience.

Throughout history, travel has always contained the aspects of exploration, discovery, and financial gain at its very core. It is no different today; people want to visit places they’ve never been to learn about the heritage, culture, and natural wonders found at those locales. Business travelers seek to buy and sell in a global economy while technology makes even the most remote places more accessible to the traveling public. Today’s traveler wants to explore the Amazon rainforest, conduct business in Dubai, walk the Great Wall of China, ride a gondola in Venice, watch kangaroos in the Australian outback, gaze across the Grand Canyon, and be amazed by the engineering of Stonehenge. Along with this desire is the guest’s expectation that the hospitality and tourism industry be ready and able to not only meet, but be capable of exceeding, his or her travel needs.
Chapter 1 – Hospitality and Tourism

1910 – Grand Old Hotel

1953 – The American Hotel Institute is launched; today it operates as the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Institute (AHLEI).

1957 – Hilton Hotels offer a direct-dial telephone service in guestrooms.

1969 – Chain hotels begin offering swimming pools as a way to increase profits.

1981 – The boutique hotel concept is born.

1990 – The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) becomes law and hotels begin offering accessible guestrooms and amenities.

2000 – Following the attacks of 9/11, hotels implement new anti-terrorism and security measures.

2001 – The modern history of hospitality and tourism industry be ready and welcome the increased guest traffic.

2007 – Smartphones and “apps” are embraced by the hospitality industry, with both guests and employees utilizing the variety of services these phones provide.

2008 – Flat-screen TVs become the new standard for guestrooms. The future of innovation and change will continue to globally drive the hospitality and tourism industry.

2010 – Today, this association operates as the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Institute (AHLEI).
Hospitality has to meet the needs of modern tourism by providing a “menu” of travel choices for finding, reaching, and staying at any destination. This means the travel-based industries must depend on one another for success. For example, a business traveler has to make a sales call in a major city. It will take an airline, car-rental company, hotel, restaurants, and other local services to ensure that one person is able to reach, sleep, eat, enjoy, and conduct business during their trip. If you multiply that same total of travel needs by the number of people wishing to travel to this one city for just one day, you begin to get the idea of how large the hospitality and tourism industry in one major city might be. Now, think about the number of people globally who choose to travel each day, and the type of infrastructure the hospitality and tourism industry must have in place, so the needs of such a diverse group of people can be met.
The scope of hospitality-related businesses required to meet the needs of a destination’s guests will typically fall into one of the following groups:

Accommodations
- Hotels
- Resorts
- Motels
- Hostels
- Vacation rentals
- Vacation ownership
- Bed & Breakfast properties
- Recreational vehicles and camping

Transportation
- Airlines
- Cruise lines
- Rail
- Car rentals
- Tour/coach operators
- Bus lines
- Taxis

Food and Beverage
- Restaurants
- Full-service
- Fine dining
- Quick service
- Bars and lounges

Attractions

- Heritage sites
Diversity is a complex concept and can be very challenging to learn. Typically, diversity requires hospitality and tourism employees to be sensitive to differences such as race, gender, age, physical abilities, religion, and sexual orientation, but it is really much more than just those few items. Diversity really means each person you meet will be unique and must be appreciated as a one-of-a-kind individual. This is not a tough concept to understand but is a hard one to actually use at work each day.

To make it a little easier to understand, let’s break diversity down into a very basic idea. Diversity means learning to Respect and Value Everyone (R.A.V.E) for where they come from, the personal beliefs and life experiences they may have, and the expectations they will have, both at home and when traveling.

For anyone working in hospitality and tourism, this means that an inclusive environment must be in place to show both guests and coworkers that they are valued and respected simply for being themselves. Anyone able to accept this simple rule of respecting and valuing everyone (R.A.V.E.) can find success in the hospitality and tourism industry. How? By knowing when to ask questions to find out what is needed in order to deliver personalized services.

Guests arrive at every destination with a set of expectations and requirements that need to be met by the people operating that property, attraction, or restaurant. The delivery of the services guests want and need is known as guest service. This sounds simple, but really, guest service is one of the most difficult skills anyone working in hospitality and tourism can master. However, those who do master the skills will find working with guests to be exciting and rewarding.

So, if you had to define guest service, what might you say? A simple definition would be that guest service is meeting the needs of guests the way they want and expect them to be met. It is important to remember that guest expectations are not limited to one culture or country, but are universal and desired by every person who travels. Consequently, guest service is considered to be a key component on which both hospitality and tourism stand. This also means anyone working in the industry will be expected to know, deliver, and meet guest expectations all day, every day, and to the very best of his or her ability.

What are the basic skills of guest service? If you asked guests, they would say guest service must always include:

1. Safety—Make me feel safe.
2. Courtesy—Treat me as an individual by showing me I am valued and respected.
3. Show—Provide me with the best guest experience your property has to offer.
4. Efficiency—Meet my needs quickly and to the very best level you and your property can provide.

These guest service skills can take the form of a tangible service such as providing extra towels or pillows when requested, or intangible service such as seeing to the safety, comfort, and enjoyment guests experience during their stay.

Terms You Should Know

Tangible Services—services that provide for guest expectations using the physical assets of the property.

Intangible Services—items of value to guests such as comfort, safety, and enjoyable experiences that meet their emotional needs and expectations.
Destination Marketing

Destination marketing organizations (DMOs) specialize in attracting guests to a specific destination where hospitality and tourism are big business. Locations such as Orlando, Las Vegas, and New York City depend on the local DMO to help market and bring in visitors. Based on location, many destination marketing organizations may operate under a different name such as:

In the United States

- Convention & Visitors Bureau
- Convention & Visitors Association

Internationally

- Tourist Authority
- National Tourist Office or Organization
- Tourist Bureau
- Tourism Commission

Regardless of the organization’s name, the purpose is basically the same for all. The key role of all DMOs is to develop local economic growth, attract visitors and conventions to the local area, and globally market the availability of attractions, hotels, restaurants, and other services.

For guests, DMOs are an important resource for information about where to stay, eat, and play while visiting that destination. DMOs also serve as the official point of contact for convention and meeting planners and tour operators, which are often a major source of income for local businesses. They benefit guests, meeting planners, and tour operators by:

- Offering unbiased information about all types of services and facilities available to guests
- Providing “one-stop” information service about all local tourism sites and attractions
- Assisting in the creation of marketing materials, also known as collateral materials, to help in the sales of group tours, meetings, or conventions
- Assisting with on-site logistic and registration services
- Assisting in the coordination of local transportation, special tours, and special events

Most service are provided by DMOs at little to no cost, which is one of the greatest benefits offered by a destination marketing organization.

When traveling, people will carefully decide what type of accommodations to book for their temporary home away from home. Aided by the Internet, recommendations from family and friends, and past experiences, guests will begin to narrow down the decision, using the process of elimination.

The first decision will be to choose the type of hotel that best suits the reason for travel. A person traveling for business will have a very different set of needs than a family of four going on vacation. Because of the vast assortment of reasons people travel, the hospitality and tourism industry has developed a variety of hotel types to better meet guests’ travel needs. The types of hotels include:

Commercial Hotels—Located in downtown business districts, this type of hotel caters to business travelers, tour groups, small conferences, and the occasional tourist.

Airport Hotels—Air travel created the need for hotels located inside or near airports. Both business travelers and tourists benefit, not only from the convenient location, but also from the services offered, such as courtesy vans to and from the airport. Most offer meeting/conference room space and banquet services as a convenience to groups wishing to stay near an airport while conducting business.

All-Suite Hotels—Feature suites containing living rooms, kitchenettes, and bedrooms for guests with longer hotel stays or a wish for a more “homelike” stay. Frequent business travelers, family vacation groups, and those needing temporary living quarters all find this type of hotel very appealing.

Extended-Stay Hotels—This type of hotel is similar to all-suite hotels but usually offers full kitchens and guest laundromat. These amenities appeal to travelers staying longer than five days and who prefer less hotel- and more apartment-like services.

Residential Hotels—Residential hotels offer permanent or very long-term occupancy to guests who prefer hotel living because of the amenities such as daily housekeeping service, concierge, and uniformed services. The guest accommodations can range from a typical guestroom to a suite or condominium. This type of hotel is often known as a condo hotel.
Resort Hotels — Typically resort hotels are found in destination locations where vacationers and business groups can enjoy the property’s recreation, sports, and spa facilities along with the local area’s natural wonders and entertainment venues.

Vacation Ownership Properties — Many people prefer to vacation at the same time and same place every year, and it was this preference that led to the development of the vacation ownership property. A guest will purchase a specific number of weeks or points that are then applied to the type of accommodations the guest wishes to use. The guest then “owns” that guest unit for the same time period every year for however long the ownership is contracted to last.

Casino Hotels — Casino hotels attract guests who enjoy gaming, live entertainment, and other recreational activities such as golf, tennis, or spa facilities. They used to appeal only to vacation and leisure travelers, but today, convention and conference visitors account for a large portion of casino hotel business.

Conference and Convention Centers — This type of hotel can be as small or as large as the number of guest attendees the property wishes to attract. Guests attending an event in this type of hotel will likely spend the majority of their time at the property. Event organizers will expect the property to provide “one-stop” planning for everything. Attendees will expect the hotel to provide a range of items from guestrooms to convention space, to breakout meeting rooms, to audiovisual equipment, to meals and banquets, to live entertainment.

Bed and Breakfast Hotels — Better known as a B&B, this hotel is usually a private home that has been converted into a hotel business for overnight guests. The owner acts as the host or hostess and will welcome each guest as a temporary member of the family. Breakfast is always included in the room rate and guests expect the entire stay to feel both warm and welcoming.

Other Travel Accommodations — Hotels are not the only place travelers can stay overnight. Many people choose to go camping or travel in a recreation vehicle (RV), or stay in hostels, while others like to travel by water in yachts and sailboats.

Cruise Ships — Large, floating hotels that travel from destination to destination. Today’s ships provide the same type of accommodations, recreation, live entertainment, and amenities as land-based hotels and casinos. Cruises appeal to guests who prefer to unpack once, have their meals provided, have a choice of recreational/entertainment options and daily destinations to visit.

• What was the impact of new technologies or inventions on the hospitality and tourism industry during your chosen decade?

Activity: Map It Out

You will be assigned a country on the map shown to the right. Give one reason why a person from the United States would choose to travel to that location.

You will need to:

Ask your instructor for the Traveler Arrival Information Form. This form will tell you the number of foreign travelers who arrive each day from all over the world, expecting to find hotels, restaurants, and attractions that provide the type of guest service they are used to receiving.

Answer each question to help complete this assignment.

- What is the name of the major airport in this city?

- How many people arrive by plane at this airport each day?

- Figuring two people per room, how many hotel guestrooms must this city have available each day to house guests?

- If each hotel has 250 guestrooms available each day, how many hotels does the city need to have?

- If each restaurant can seat 150 people per hour, how many restaurants will be needed to serve dinner, from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m., each day?

- A local attraction can handle 20,000 visitors per day. How many attractions are needed to entertain the city’s guests each day?

Activity: Going International

International guests bring a different set of cultural expectations with them. These special needs mean a hotel needs to research and provide custom services in order to make the guests feel they have a home away from home.

Scenario

Your hotel is hosting a group of oil sheiks at your property. You are part of the concierge team assigned to greet them and make certain their guestrooms and meal arrangements meet their expectations. They are flying in by private jet tomorrow. Before they arrive, you need to research their dietary preferences and speak with the executive chef to make certain their stay is as perfect as possible.

Research a recipe for a typical middle eastern dish or meal item. Provide the name of the dish and the ingredients the chef will need to have on hand to prepare it.

Chapter 1 - Teacher Wraparound Sample
(Include instruction and resource data)
Over the past 100 years, the hospitality and tourism industry has experienced monumental changes due to improvements in transportation, accommodations, and new technologies. This has resulted in hospitality and tourism becoming one of the largest industries on the globe and impacting those changes was a shift in the world’s population; the traveling public’s desire to explore new places and cultures, and changing global business needs.

The Internet has had a major influence on travelers by opening up the world of hospitality and tourism as a global marketplace where someone can experience new people, places, and things. Travelers can quickly measure the cost of each travel choice against the value that the item will deliver; giving technology the ability to impact decisions about travel spending, length of stay, and type of accommodation required.

The types of businesses making up the industry, such as airlines, rental cars, hotels, restaurants, and attractions, have created a vast network of companies looking for talented people who wish to build a career in hospitality and tourism.

The hospitality and tourism industry grew so quickly in the early 20th century that it was necessary for companies engaged in the same type of business to find a way to connect with one another. This resulted in the birth of professional organizations such as the American Hotel & Lodging Association (AH&LA) and the National Restaurant Association (NRA). The purpose of industry associations is to protect, educate, and promote the needs of the people and businesses belonging to the associations. Known as member services, some examples of what associations provide to members are communicating new business trends, updating changes in laws and government requirements, and lobbying on behalf of the membership in the halls of Congress.

This unit will take a look at the history, size, and elements that, over time, have fused together hospitality and tourism into one industry. Also, this section will explore the types of careers and the cycles involved for those wishing to pursue a career in hospitality.
Chapter 1: Hospitality and Tourism

Chapter 1 Overview
Chapter 1 traces the history of hospitality and tourism over the past 100 years, and the impact technology, social change, and guest preferences have had on the type of available services.

Students will be introduced to hospitality and tourism from a global perspective to ensure they see the “big picture” of the industry early on in their studies.

This chapter will also provide the foundation learning about the four key areas of hospitality and tourism, and illustrate the connections linking the two together.

Students will be shown the purpose and role of diversity on a global scale as well as the role of guest service in both divisions of the industry. These two soft skills are significant to learners since both are key skill areas requiring mastery by anyone seeking a career in the industry.

Also included, is content about the types of hotels available to support hospitality and tourism as well as an introduction to destination marketing used by visitor and convention bureaus.

Hospitality Profile

Joseph A. McInerney, CHA
Former President & CEO
American Hotel & Lodging Association

Joseph A. McInerney, CHA, served as president and chief executive officer of American Hotel & Lodging Association (AH&LA) from 2001 to 2013. As the head executive of the largest trade association representing the U.S. lodging industry, Mr. McInerney implemented and directed AH&LA’s services, as well as provided leadership to association members. He also worked directly with the volunteer officers, board of directors, and partner state associations in determining the direction of the industry.

Mr. McInerney reorganized the association to streamline efficiency and strengthen its core operations, including consolidating its two affiliates to form the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Foundation. The AHLEF is the only educational dollar-dispensing, not-for-profit premier organization for scholarships, professional certification, instructional material, and funding for key industry research. Additionally, Mr. McInerney spearheaded the changing of the membership structure from a federation to a dual-membership format, streamlined the board of directors, and clarified the organization’s mission.

Your Task: Use the information contained in the textbook’s profile about this industry professional to complete the Professional Profile Activity in the student workbook. You may need to conduct additional research of your own about the profile topic covered in the workbook as well.

Chapter 1 – Hospitality and Tourism | Teacher’s Wraparound Edition

The pace of change seemed to explode following 1945 and the end of World War II, and the impact of those changes altered the face of hospitality and tourism forever. No longer was travel reserved for only the very wealthy. In the 1950s and 1960s, all forms of transportation became more accessible and affordable. This resulted in business travel becoming a common practice, and the birth of the family vacation.

In the following decades, more and more people began to travel, not just to visit family and friends, but for the pure pleasure of seeing the world. The result was tourism as we know it today. Hospitality and tourism have grown into a large industry, so much so that many countries, such as the United States, Japan, Great Britain, and China, consider it to be a key business driver within their economies.

Section 1.1

Terms you should know

Hospitality—the reception and entertainment of guests, visitors, or strangers at resorts; membership clubs, conventions, attractions, special events; and other services for travelers and tourists.

Tourism—tourist travel and the services connected with it, regarded as an industry combined with hospitality.

Pineapple Fun Fact

In 1907, E.M. Statler built the first modern hotel, the Statler, in Buffalo, NY, with private bathrooms and a radio in every room. Eventually, his chain of hotels had 5,300 rooms that could accommodate 6,700 guests a day. He is considered the father of the modern hotel.

Classroom Group Activity: Introducing Brainstorming

Purpose
Brainstorming and critical thinking are key skills used in problem-solving by the hospitality and tourism industry. They are developed over time through practice and experience. This exercise will help develop student skills in this area.

Tell
Each group to brainstorm ways to use the strategies and methods they previously selected in the Introduction section’s Brainstorming Activity for use in their own career development.

Explain
The plan should include how they would plan to implement each strategy and why they believe it will work as part of their career path.

Present
Ask each group to present one idea to the class so other groups may provide suggestions and ideas of additional ways to make a strategy help in career development.

The Traveling Public

The hospitality and tourism industry exists to meet the needs of the traveling public. The reasons for traveling are varied, with each person having personal criteria for making any journey. However, the reasons why most people travel can usually be placed into one of five categories:

- Recreation
  a wish for rest, relaxation, sports, and entertainment.

- Culture
  a desire to learn about different places and things of interest.

- Business
  a need to conduct business, attend a conference, convention, or meeting.

- Visits to family and friends
  a wish or need to spend time with loved ones.

- Health issues
  a need for diagnosis or treatment from a non-local medical facility.

The Internet also has a huge impact on hospitality and tourism. Not just because it is easier to find and book travel online, but because online information about the people, places, and things found around the globe has created a greater interest in visiting those destinations.

Lesson Plan: 1.1.1 Modern Changes to Hospitality and Tourism

Students will become familiar with:

1. The five key reasons why people travel:
   a. Recreation
   b. Business
   c. Culture
   d. Health issues
   e. Visit with family and friends

2. The five key changes over the past 100 years to the hospitality and tourism industry by becoming more:
   a. Organized
   b. Affordable
   c. Available
   d. Accessible
   e. Focused on meeting guest needs

Classroom Activity: The Traveling Public

Part 1

Ask
Starting in the 1950s, people began to travel more often; what were the five key reasons for their travel?

Discuss

The top five reasons people travel are:

- Recreation—Changes in labor laws led to paid time off from work which allowed Americans to take advantage of the new road network being built.
- Culture—The idea of taking “road trips” became an established part of American culture due to easy travel by car.
- Business—The new highway network allowed American businesses to expand their client base to more distant towns and cities.
- Visits to family and friends—Traveling as a family was easy with new destinations available to explore.
- Health issues—The average American could now economically travel by car in order to seek out medical treatment from the best doctors in the country.

History of Hospitality and Tourism

The modern history of hospitality and tourism really began in 1910 when 60 hotel operators formed the American Hotel Protective Association. Today, this association operates as the American Hotel & Lodging Association (AH&LA) which acts as a moving force in ensuring that the hospitality and tourism industry continues to thrive and meet the needs of its global audience.

Throughout history, travel has always contained the aspects of exploration, discovery, and financial gain at its very core. It is no different today; people want to visit places they’ve never been to learn about the heritage, culture, and natural wonders found at those locales. Business travelers seek to buy and sell in a global economy while technology makes even the most remote places more accessible to the traveling public. Today’s traveler wants to explore the Amazon rainforest, conduct business in Dubai, walk the Great Wall of China, ride a gondola in Venice, watch kangaroos in the Australian outback, gaze across the Grand Canyon, and be amazed by the engineering of Stonehenge. Along with this desire is the guest’s expectation that the hospitality and tourism industry be ready and able to not only meet, but be capable of exceeding, his or her travel needs.
Chapter 1 – Hospitality and Tourism

1953 – The American Hotel Institute is launched; today it operates as the American Hotel & Lodging Educational Institute (AHLEI).

1957 – Hilton Hotels offer a direct-dial telephone service in guestrooms.

1960s – Chain hotels begin offering swimming pools as a way to increase profits.

1969 – Chain hotels begin offering swimming pools as a way to increase profits.

1972 – Hotels begin accepting credit cards to “guarantee” guestroom reservations.

1981 – The boutique hotel concept is born.

1989 – The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) becomes law and hotels begin offering accessible guestrooms and amenities.

2001 – Following the attacks of 9/11, hotels implement new anti-terrorism and security measures.

2007 – Smartphones and “apps” are embraced by the hospitality industry, with both guests and employees utilizing the variety of services these phones provide.

2008 – Flat-screen TVs become the new standard for guestrooms. The future of innovation and change will continue to globally drive the hospitality and tourism industry.

2010 – Following the attacks of 9/11, hotels implement new anti-terrorism and security measures.

Chapter 1 – Hospitality and Tourism

Terms you should know

Infrastructure—the basic, underlying framework or features of a system or organization.

Hospitality has to meet the needs of modern tourism by providing a “menu” of travel choices for finding, reaching, and staying at any destination. This means the travel-based industries must depend on one another for success. For example, a business traveler has to make a sales call in a major city. It will take an airline, car-rental company, hotel, restaurants, and other local services to ensure that one person is able to reach, sleep, eat, enjoy, and conduct business during his or her trip.

Consider

If you multiply that same amount of travel needs by the total number of people wishing to travel to this one city for just one day, you begin to get the idea of how large the hospitality and tourism industry might be in one major city. Let’s take that one step further. Think about the number of people globally who choose to travel each day, and the type of infrastructure the hospitality industry must have in place, so the needs of such a diverse group of people can be met.

Ask students to list the type of infrastructure any city would need to have in place in order for guests to be able to:

1. Find a destination
2. Reach a destination
3. Stay at a destination

Standards

CCSS WHST.11-12.6 Use technology, including the Internet, to produce, publish, and update individual or shared writing products in response to ongoing feedback, including new arguments or information.
Scope of the Industry

The scope of hospitality-related businesses required to meet the needs of a destination’s guests will typically fall into one of the following groups:

Accommodations
- Hotels
- Resorts
- Motels
- Hostels
- Vacation rentals
- Vacation ownership
- Bed & Breakfast properties
- Recreational vehicles and camping

Transportation
- Airlines
- Cruise lines
- Rail
- Car rentals
- Tour/coach operators
- Bus lines
- Taxis

Food and Beverage
- Restaurants
- Full-service
- Fine dining
- Quick service
- Bars and lounges

Attractions
- Theme parks
- Zoos
- National, state, and local parks
- Natural wonders
- Heritage sites

The appeal of each is based on why the person is traveling—for exploration, adventure, romance, education, business, family, health, or relaxation.

Food and Beverage—Just as with accommodations, people will choose a specific dining venue will depending on the location and the reasons for eating out.

Transportation—Travel depends first on transportation for getting the traveling public to their destinations. Over the past 100 years, the methods of transportation have improved, allowing people the ability to visit the most remote places on earth with relative ease.

Attractions—Once people arrive at any destination, they will need something to do. For many, it is to conduct prearranged business. But for leisure travelers, it means visiting, doing, and seeing something that is only available at that location.

Standards
- CCSS SL.11-12.1a Come to discussions prepared, having read and researched material under study; explicitly draw on that preparation by referring to evidence from texts and other research on the topic or issue to stimulate a thoughtful, well-reasoned exchange of ideas.

Diversity is a complex concept and can be very challenging to learn. Typically, diversity requires hospitality and tourism employees to be sensitive to differences such as race, gender, age, physical abilities, religion, and sexual orientation, but it is really much more than just those few items. Diversity really means each person you meet will be unique and must be appreciated as a one-of-a-kind individual. This is not a tough concept to understand but is a hard one to actually use at work each day.

To make it a little easier to understand, let’s break diversity down into a very basic idea. Diversity means learning to Respect and Value Everyone (R.A.V.E) for where they come from, the personal beliefs and life experiences they may have, and the expectations they will have, both at home and when traveling.

For anyone working in hospitality and tourism, this means that an inclusive environment must be in place to show both guests and co-workers that they are valued and respected simply for being themselves.

Anyone able to accept this simple rule of respecting and valuing everyone (R.A.V.E.) can find success in the hospitality and tourism industry. How? By knowing when to ask questions to find out what is needed in order to deliver personalized services.

Diversity

Every living creature requires food, water, shelter, and space to survive. Those needs are provided to the traveling public by the hospitality and tourism industry, along with comfort, safety, and understanding for the diversity of a global audience.

Lesson Plan: 1.5.1 Respecting and Valuing One Another

1. Working in groups of 2-4 people, students will explore each individual’s knowledge, skills, and achievements in a group discussion format.

2. Using the A R.A.V.E. Review template (Resource USB), each group will create a “news release” highlighting the combined skills and abilities they bring to the workplace.
Guest Service on a Global Scale

Guests arrive at every destination with a set of expectations and requirements that need to be met by the people operating that property, attraction, or restaurant. The delivery of the services guests want and need is known as guest service. This sounds simple, but really, guest service is one of the most difficult skills anyone working in hospitality and tourism can master. However, those who do master the skills will find working with guests to be exciting and rewarding.

So, if you had to define guest service, what might you say? A simple definition would be that guest service is meeting the needs of guests the way they want and expect them to be met. It is important to remember that guest expectations are not limited to one culture or country, but are universal and desired by every person who travels. Consequently, guest service is considered to be a key component on which both hospitality and tourism stand. This also means anyone working in the industry will be expected to know, deliver, and meet guest expectations all day, every day, and to the very best of his or her ability.

What are the basic skills of guest service? If you asked guests, they would say guest service must always include:

1. Safety—Make me feel safe.
2. Courtesy—Treat me as an individual by showing me I am valued and respected.
3. Show—Provide me with the best guest experience your property has to offer.
4. Efficiency—Meet my needs quickly and to the very best level you and your property can provide.

These guest service skills can take the form of a tangible service such as providing extra towels or pillows when requested, or intangible service such as seeing to the safety, comfort, and enjoyment guests experience during their stay.

Terms You Should Know

Tangible Services—services that provide for guest expectations using the physical assets of the property.

Intangible Services—items of value to guests such as comfort, safety, and enjoyable experiences that meet their emotional needs and expectations.
Destination Marketing

Destination marketing organizations (DMOs) specialize in attracting guests to a specific destination where hospitality and tourism are big business. Locations such as Orlando, Las Vegas, and New York City depend on the local DMO to help market and bring in visitors. Based on location, many destination marketing organizations may operate under a different name such as:

In the United States
- Convention & Visitors Bureau
- Convention & Visitors Association

Internationally
- Tourist Authority
- National Tourist Office or Organization
- Tourist Bureau
- Tourism Commission

Regardless of the organization’s name, the purpose is basically the same for all. The key role of all DMOs is to develop local economic growth, attract visitors and conventions to the local area, and globally market the availability of attractions, hotels, restaurants, and other services.

For guests, DMOs are an important resource for information about where to stay, eat, and play while visiting that destination. DMOs also serve as the official point of contact for convention and meeting planners and tour operators, which are often a major source of income for local businesses. They benefit guests, meeting planners, and tour operators by:

- Offering unbiased information about all types of services and facilities available to guests
- Providing “one-stop” information service about all local tourism sites and attractions
- Assisting in the creation of marketing materials, also known as collateral materials, to help in the sales of group tours, meetings, or conventions
- Assisting with on-site logistic and registration services
- Assisting in the coordination of local transportation, special tours, and special events

Most service are provided by DMOs at little to no cost, which is one of the greatest benefits offered by a destination marketing organization.

- A place to stay
- A variety of places or menus for dining
- A variety of things to do for conference attendees and their family members or guests
- An efficient way of getting from place to place (transportation choices must be capable of moving a large group quickly)

Chapter 1 – Hospitality and Tourism

When traveling, people will carefully decide what type of accommodations to book for their temporary home away from home. Aided by the Internet, recommendations from family and friends, and past experiences, guests will begin to narrow down the decision, using the process of elimination.

The first decision will be to choose the type of hotel that best suits the reason for travel. A person traveling for business will have a very different set of needs than a family of four going on vacation. Because of the vast assortment of reasons people travel, the hospitality and tourism industry has developed a variety of hotel types to better meet guests’ travel needs. The types of hotels include:

- Commercial Hotels—Located in downtown business districts, this type of hotel caters to business travelers, tour groups, small conferences, and the occasional tourist.
- Airport Hotels—Air travel created the need for hotels located inside or near airports. Both business travelers and tourists benefit, not only from the convenient location, but also from the services offered, such as courtesy vans to and from the airport. Most offer meeting/conference room space and banquet services as a convenience to groups wishing to stay near an airport while conducting business.
- All-Suite Hotels—Feature suites containing living rooms, kitchenettes, and bedrooms for guests with longer hotel stays or a wish for a more “homelike” stay. Frequent business travelers, family vacation groups, and those needing temporary living quarters all find this type of hotel very appealing.
- Extended-Stay Hotels—This type of hotel is similar to all-suite hotels but usually offers full kitchens and guest laundromat. These amenities appeal to travelers staying longer than five days and who prefer less hotel- and more apartment-like services.
- Residential Hotels—Residential hotels offer permanent or very long-term occupancy to guests who prefer hotel living because of the amenities such as daily housekeeping service, concierge, and uniformed services. The guest accommodations can range from a typical guestroom to a suite or condominium. This type of hotel is often known as a condo hotel.

Lesson Plan: 1.7.1 Accommodation Choices

Review and discuss the various types of accommodations and the reasons behind the guest choice when selecting a place to stay.

1. List the types of hotels according to the markets they attempt to attract and serve.
2. Ask students to define each type of hotel and what type of guests they target.
3. Discuss other types of accommodations and guest preferences behind why they choose each one.
Resort Hotels—Typically resort hotels are found in destination locations where vacationers and business groups can enjoy the property’s recreation, sports, and spa facilities along with the local area’s natural wonders and entertainment venues.

Vacation Ownership Properties—Many people prefer to vacation at the same time and same place every year, and it was this preference that led to the development of the vacation ownership property. A guest will purchase a specific number of weeks or points that are then applied to the type of accommodations the guest wishes to use. The guest then “owns” that guest unit for the same time period every year for however long the ownership is contracted to last.

Casino Hotels—Casino hotels attract guests who enjoy gaming, live entertainment, and other recreational activities such as golf, tennis, or spa facilities. They used to appeal only to vacation and leisure travelers, but today, convention and conference visitors account for a large portion of casino hotel business.

Conference and Convention Centers—This type of hotel can be as small or as large as the number of guest attendees the property wishes to attract. Guests attending an event in this type of hotel will likely spend the majority of their time at the property. Event organizers will expect the property to provide “one-stop” planning for everything. Attendees will expect the hotel to provide a range of items from guestrooms to convention space, to breakout meeting rooms, to audiovisual equipment, to meals and banquets, to live entertainment.

Bed and Breakfast Hotels—Better known as a B&B, this hotel is usually a private home that has been converted into a hotel business for overnight guests. The owner acts as the host or hostess and will welcome each guest as a temporary member of the family. Breakfast is always included in the room rate and guests expect the entire stay to feel both warm and welcoming.

Other Travel Accommodations—Hotels are not the only place travelers can stay overnight. Many people choose to go camping or travel in a recreation vehicle (RV), or stay in hostels, while others like to travel by water in yachts and sailboats.

Cruise Ships—Large, floating hotels that travel from destination to destination. Today’s ships provide the same type of accommodations, recreation, live entertainment, and amenities as land-based hotels and casinos. Cruises appeal to guests who prefer to unpack once, have their meals provided, have a choice of recreational/entertainment options and daily destinations to visit.
Section 1.1
1. In what time period did travel become more affordable for the average person?
2. What did affordable travel give birth to?

Section 1.4
1. Hotels, resorts, motels, hostels, vacation rentals, vacation ownership, bed & Breakfast properties, recreational vehicles, and camping. They all provide a place to lodge for the night.
2. Airlines, cruise lines, rail, car rentals, tour/coach operators, taxis, and bus lines. They all provide shared, public transportation.
3. Full-service, fine dining or quick service restaurants, and bars and lounges. They provide different types of meal service to guests.

Section 1.7
Match the guest to the type of accommodation best suited to their travel needs.

2. Two sisters are planning a trip together. They both want to visit a variety of different cities or countries on the trip but hate the thought of having to pack and unpack at each destination. What type of accommodations would be the best choice for the sisters’ needs?
3. A couple are planning their honeymoon trip. They would prefer a place that is quiet and romantic with a lot of character. They also want it to be small, warm, and welcoming. What type of accommodations would be the best choice for the honeymooners’ needs?
4. A family of four likes to take a vacation every year, during the same week of July. They always go to the same place and wish they owned a home at that destination. What type of accommodations would be the best choice for the family’s needs?
